HONORING CALIFORNIA'S EVERYDAY Heroes: FIRST RESPONDERS' DAY

By Senator Rosilicie Ochoa Bogh

WHEN an emergency strikes, they're the first on scene. Whether it's a wildfire, a traffic accident, a medical crisis, or a public safety threat, California's first responders stand ready day or night, rain or shine.

That's why I'm proud to have introduced Senate Concurrent Resolution (SCR) 93, officially declaring October 28, 2025, as First Responders' Day in California. This resolution aligns our state with the national recognition established by President Joe Biden in 2022 and, more importantly, gives our communities an annual opportunity to reflect on and honor the individuals who put themselves in harm's way to keep us safe.

Why First Responders' Day Matters First responders are the backbone of public safety in California. From police officers and firefighters to emergency medical technicians, paramedics, 911 dispatchers, and public works professionals, these men and women are our first line of defense. They act fast, under pressure, in situations that most of us would find overwhelming. But their value extends beyond crisis response. They are the calm in chaos, the strength in uncertainty, and the hope in disaster. Their work saves lives, protects property, and builds trust within our neighborhoods.

Across the United States, more than 1.5 million first responders serve our communities. In California alone, they play a critical role in our ongoing efforts to tackle wildfires, earthquakes, storms, and a wide range of public health emergencies. They do it with professionalism, courage, and compassion.

Local Heroes, Statewide Impact This resolution was inspired in part by the tireless efforts of local leaders like Laura Dyberg and Terisa Bonito of the Mountain Rim Fire Safe Council (MRFSC). Based in the San Bernardino Mountains, MRFSC has been a pillar of wildfire prevention and public education since 1999. Their work, especially during the devastating 2023 snowstorm, has shown how vital local action is to public safety.

MRFSC represents the spirit of collaboration and resilience that defines California's response to natural disasters. Alongside their partners in the Inland Empire Fire Safe Alliance, they have built a network of over 14 fire safe councils across the region, bringing together nonprofits, state agencies, utility companies, and first responders.

A Day to Say Thank You SCR 93 is not just a symbolic gesture. It is a call to action. It encourages every Californian to recognize the contributions of our first responders not just with words, but with support. Whether it is through community events, educational campaigns, or simple acts of gratitude, we all have a role in uplifting the people who rush toward danger so we can stay safe.

To every first responder across California, thank you for your service, your strength, and your sacrifice. You make our communities stronger, and you make our state proud.

This edition is dedicated to the the memory of Marlene Kiemel, a very special and dedicated volunteer [1947 to 2025]

ASSEMBLYMAN Tom LACKEY 34TH DISTRICT

OUR first responders represent the very best of our communities. Every day, they step forward with courage, and an unwavering commitment to safeguarding the lives of others. Their service — often performed under extraordinary pressure and personal risk — reflects the highest ideals of public duty.

As someone who served nearly three decades with the California Highway Patrol, I have witnessed firsthand the sacrifices these men and women make, as well as the strength and resilience required of their families. Their dedication is not just admirable — it is essential to the safety and well-being of every community in our state.

I am profoundly grateful for their service and will forever be proud to honor these extraordinary individuals who continue to answer the call, no matter the challenge.

SAN Bernardino County's first responders embody the spirit of service and resilience that defines our region. They work tirelessly — often under the most challenging conditions — to keep our families, homes, and communities safe. We don't always get to tell them how much we appreciate their steadfast service and dedication. While October 28 commemorates "First Responders Day" and provides an opportunity for us all to reflect on the efforts of these brave men and women, it's important to recognize they do this work every day. Today and every day, we salute you.

We are especially grateful for our first responders here in our mountain communities. These dedicated professionals rush toward danger when others seek safety, providing critical care, comfort, and protection in our most vulnerable moments. Whether battling wildfires, responding to medical crises, or maintaining order during disasters, their commitment to saving lives never wavers.

Thank you to our San Bernardino County first responders and to our federal, state, and local agencies who collaborate seamlessly to put service above self when disaster strikes. Thank you also to the Mountain Rim Fire Safe Council for all you do to educate the community and the work you do to reduce the threat of catastrophic wildfires.

California Department of Forestry & Fire Protection

Since 1885 the Department of Forestry and Fire Protection (CAL FIRE) has protected the people, property, and natural resources of California. The men and women of CAL FIRE are dedicated to the fire protection and stewardship of over 31 million acres of California's privately-owned wildlands. The heart of the Department's emergency response and resource protection capability is a force of approximately 8,000 permanent and seasonal employees that help fulfill the departments mission to serve and safeguard the people and protect the property and resources of California.

FIRE PREVENTION

Preventing wildfires in the State Responsibility Area (SRA) is a vital part of CAL FIRE's mission. The Department responds to nearly 6,000 wildland fires that burn on average over 260,000 acres each year. Beyond its wildland fire fighting role, CAL FIRE is an "all-risk" department. The Department is always ready to respond - medical aids; hazardous material spills; swiftwater rescues; search and rescue missions; civil disturbances; train wrecks; floods, earthquakes and more.

OSFM

Since 1995, the Office of the State Fire Marshal (OSFM) has supported the mission of CAL FIRE by focusing on fire prevention. Through major program elements that include engineering, education, enforcement, and support from the State Board of Fire Services, OSFM has a wide variety of fire safety responsibilities.

RESOURCE MANAGEMENT

Through its foresters and other natural resource professionals, CAL FIRE is responsible for the management and protection of California's natural resources under its Forest Practice, Urban Forestry, Fuel Reduction, Demonstration State Forest, Pest Management, Landowner Assistance, Environmental Protection and Regulation, Archaeology, Fire and Resource Assessment, and Nursery programs. CAL FIRE foresters promote conservation and the importance of our trees and forests to Californians of all ages.

ONE Firefighter's OBSERVATION ON THE IMPORTANCE OF EVACUATIONS

EVACUATIONS are not taken lightly by any incident commander. Communities are placed under evacuation based on the threat created by the potential growth and future of the fire. Time to evacuate communities is also considered, when possible, with trigger points established. The evacuation zones on the Pilot and Blue Cut Fires were established by incident commanders with a combined fire experience that is in the hundreds of years. Trust me when I tell you, “You do NOT know more than they do.” Do not mistake getting lucky for superior knowledge; it is a fatal error.

Once the life safety issue has been mitigated through residents complying with evacuation orders, firefighters focus on the next step: Structure defense. Firefighters enter an evacuated community with different tactical considerations. While life, property, and infrastructure remain the priority order, we are now talking about the lives of firefighters. We shall engage in the defense of a community until the last possible moment. We are trained and equipped to accomplish this, yet when the fire front comes crashing through, we will retreat. Through narrow streets choked with smoke and fire pushing across the lanes, we shall retreat. However, after the front pushes through, these same firefighters will rush back in to reengage and protect homes.

The argument that firefighters and law enforcement will come save you if it gets really bad is not realistic. The evacuation order is public safety authority exercising its due diligence to protect your lives.

Consider the ramifications of staying in a community that is under an evacuation order: When the same fire makes the ridge and explodes into town, I promise that you will panic. If you cannot accept this fact, realize that everyone who made the same decision as you is now panicking. Now that you are trying to escape via the same two-lane road that is down to near zero visibility, accept that an accident is going to occur that will block your only path to survival. Recognize that your decision has now doomed the lives of the firefighters and law enforcement officers trapped behind you that were assigned to protect your community. When looked at from this angle, failing to heed an evacuation order is one of the most selfish and dangerous actions an individual can take.

WANT TO SUPPORT FIRST RESPONDERS IN A DIFFERENT WAY?

Check to see if your local fire department or law enforcement has a related association or non-profit to donate directly at a local level. Or consider these options:*

Gary Sinise Foundation: Supports the physical and mental well-being of first responders, veterans, and their families.

Firehouse Subs Public Safety Foundation: Supports first responders with equipment and resources.

Operation Gratitude: Provides support to first responders and their families.

First Responder Support Network: Our goal is to help First Responders and their families recover from traumatic experiences and live healthier and happier lives by offering a new perspective on stress and providing resiliency skills for improved long-term coping.

First Responders Foundation: Offers behavioral health services and other support for first responders and their families.

Operation First Response: Supports wounded heroes, disabled veterans, and first responders.

Please note: MRFSC is not affiliated with any of these entities. You should always research non-profits before contributing funds.*

RESIDENTS evacuating help first responders by preventing road congestion, allowing them to access neighborhoods to fight the fire and rescue those who need immediate help. An orderly, early evacuation also reduces the number of people first responders need to locate and assist and frees them up to focus on critical life-saving operations and property protection. How residents evacuating helps first responders:

■ Keeps roads clear: When residents leave early, they help prevent traffic jams. This is crucial for allowing fire engines, ambulances, and other emergency vehicles to move freely to and from the fire zone, according to the Los Angeles Fire Department.

■ Reduces emergency workload: When a significant portion of a community has evacuated, first responders can focus their efforts on areas of highest risk and on individuals who may not be able to evacuate on their own, such as those with mobility issues.

■ Allows for quicker response:

Authorities may not have time to go door-to-door in an intense, fast-moving wildfire. By leaving early, residents ensure their own safety and allow first responders to work more efficiently.

■ Prevents people from getting trapped: Evacuating early gives residents the best chance of getting out safely before roads become blocked by fire, smoke, or traffic. This prevents first responders from having to risk their own lives to rescue people who are trapped.

“Next to creating a life, the finest thing a man can do is save one.”

—Abraham Lincoln
(16th President of the United States)

Evacuation TIPS

FIRE SEASON is no longer a “season”. In our area we must be fire safe all year long. The recent destructive fires in Southern California are harsh reminders that one never knows when wildfire will hit.

Long before fire threatens, plan your evacuation. When evacuation seems likely, put your plan into action. Make a list of items you want to take with you during an evacuation. Here’s an example, but prepare your own list:

- Have a flashlight and portable battery-operated radio on hand at all times
- Prescriptions / medications
- Eyeglasses
- Important documents (birth certificates, passports, insurance papers & inventory), personal financial records (phone & address books, tax records, computer backup drives, school, vaccination records), photos, art.

- Jewelry
- Pet, pet food, leash, carrier
- Child’s favorite toy
- other...

1. Keep your “Important Stuff” list handy, on the fridge, for example.
2. Keep sturdy boxes ready for collecting things on your list.
3. Prepare an emergency supply kit.
4. Copy all important documents and store with a friend or family out of the area.
5. Keep a regular/paper address book in addition to what may be stored in your computer or cell phone as this equipment may not work if power is out or towers are down.
6. During fire season, always have at least half a tank of gas in your car. Gas stations may not operate if power goes out. And you may not be able to evacuate by the shortest route out of your area.

“When a man becomes a fireman his greatest act of bravery has been accomplished. What he does after that is all in the line of work.”

—Edward F. Croker
(former New York City fire Department Chief)

Help us keep you safe during a disaster by registering for emergency notification systems. Stay prepared and protect your loved ones should an emergency occur.

TENS

During a major disaster such as a wildfire, your Fire and Sheriff’s Departments use a system known as the Telephone Emergency Notification System or TENS to send high-speed mass notifications by telephone and text messages. This system helps us get you critical updates, such as evacuation information, as quickly as possible.

The County uses a database of landline telephone numbers, which is updated every six months, to send emergency messages to landline phones only. By signing up, residents can receive emergency text messages on their cell phones, add voice over internet phone numbers (V.O.I.P.), and manage their own account using a valid email address. Those without internet connections can sign up by calling 2-1-1 or (888) 435-7565. TENS alerts do not generally go out to the entire County but instead are targeted to affected areas. Register today!

The Ready San Bernardino County app will help you prepare and plan for how to respond to a disaster in your area. Using the Ready San Bernardino County app, you will be able to:

- Share your status with your selected contacts with the push of a button.
- Receive critical emergency alerts via push notification.
- Locate San Bernardino County’s emergency shelters.
- View up-to-date evacuation route maps.
- Get the latest news and weather for the San Bernardino County area.
- Create a personalized Emergency Preparedness Plan by answering five basic questions.

Natural Resources Conservation Service

WHO IS THE NRCS? The USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is the federal agency that works with private landowners to help them protect their natural resources and keep watersheds healthy. NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based assistance, partnerships, and cooperative problem solving at the community level.

THE PROBLEM Due to extreme fire behavior, unprecedented landscape-scale fires, and wind events, the impact to California's forests has been widespread and destructive. Events following the damage from fires can be detrimental to watersheds, public safety, and long-term recovery of these landscapes. Responding quickly after a fire and offering select practices may offer a long-term solution to address the long-lasting impacts of high intensity fires.

NRCS ASSISTANCE TO PRIVATE FORESTLAND NRCS can provide technical and financial assistance for private forestland owners to promote healthy and productive forests, reduce soil erosion, enhance fish and wildfire habitat, and minimize impacts to water quality and reduce wildfire risks. NRCS can also provide post-fire resource protection and public safety in areas affected by wildfire.

RESOURCE CONSERVATION DISTRICT

The Inland Empire Resource Conservation District (IERCD) is a public agency serving the Upper Santa Ana Watershed, including portions of the San Bernardino Mountains. The IERCD's mission focuses on open space preservation, sustainable agriculture, forest health and fire resiliency, and education and outreach. IERCD staff work with private landowners to provide resources and technical assistance on a variety of conservation topics, including forest health and fire resiliency, and collaborate with agency and non-profit partners to increase the pace and scale of conservation work. The IERCD also oversees the Regional Forest and Fire Capacity Program for the San Bernardino Mountains.

HEADWATERS RESILIENCY PARTNERSHIP

HRP’s vision is clear: an Inland Empire mountains and foothills region where partner expertise and resources align with regional priorities to improve the health and resilience of our watersheds, natural resources, ecosystems, and communities. By working together now, we can reduce the risks of catastrophic wildfire and ensure the future of the lands and waters that sustain us all.
Please feel free to connect with the partnership at hrp@sbvmwd.com.

When you turn on your tap in the Inland Empire, your water likely started its journey in the headwaters of streams located in the San Bernardino mountains. As we know, these areas face increasing risks from catastrophic wildfire and drought. Communities that rely on mountain watersheds need to be prepared not only to respond to fire emergencies but also to live with wildfire as a recurring part of our landscape. Preparedness and resilience are key. That’s why the Inland Empire Headwaters Resiliency Partnership (HRP) was formed. This coalition of federal, state, and local agencies, nonprofits, scientists, and community groups is working together to protect our local mountains, water supplies, and communities from the growing threat of wildfire. HRP brings together a diverse group of organizations with a common goal of shared stewardship. Each contributes unique skills—from firefighting and planning to habitat restoration and ecological monitoring.
